Do you treat clients with unresolved trauma?

How is trauma treated at Santé?

According to the American Psychological Association trauma is “an emotional response to a terrible event.” Most people associate trauma with agonizing events, but any distressing event outside of the typical human experience can be traumatic.

At Santé, after 25 years of trauma identification and resolution work, we recognize that no two people experience the same traumatic situation and walk away from it in the same way. What may be a Big “T” or Little “t” to one isn’t to somebody else. There’s also the unintended consequence of a hierarchical approach to trauma that diminishes and often overlooks or even brushes off perceived “lesser” traumatic experiences as insignificant. Any and all trauma can have lingering effects on a person if left unaddressed and unresolved; unresolved traumas accumulate causing exponential damage and destruction.

Santé treats unresolved trauma in conjunction with other issues an individual may be facing, including substance abuse, problematic sexual behaviors and co-occurring disordered eating. An initial assessment by Santé’s clinical staff can help determine the best course of action and healing for an individual.

Effective treatment of symptoms related to trauma include cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT), eye movement desensitization and reprocessing (EMDR), as well as medication where necessary. The goals of trauma therapy include creating safety, processing thoughts and feelings, and building coping skills.

Your clients or patients may be feeling uncertain about what they need and what the best next steps are for their healing journey. We're here to help. To increase the likelihood of long-term recovery, Santé's clinical team uses an integrated model where substance abuse recovery and trauma resolution components are working simultaneously, resulting in mindfulness, distress tolerance, reduced shame, emotional regulation, and interpersonal effectiveness. Treatment includes a variety of clinical tools like individual therapy, group therapy, neurofeedback, EMDR, experiential therapy, equine therapy, expressive arts, physical fitness, and more! We're also specially equipped to provide trauma informed care for our clients who are suffering from the effects of trauma.

"Every day I experience how our clients' trauma history and hurtful core beliefs about themselves drives their addiction and creates additional trauma in their lives. Addressing only the addiction is like mowing down the weeds in one's yard—they keep popping back up because the root was never dealt with. Trauma survivors can heal when given the opportunity to share their stories, experience support, process their trauma and learn the healthy coping and social skills needed to live a satisfying life in recovery. When one no longer needs to mask pain with addictions, true recovery can be lived one day at a time for a lifetime!" - Shelley Evans, M.Ed., LPC, EMDR Certified, Primary Therapist at Santé

Courage to Look Within

It doesn't have to be rational... so few things are with individuals suffering from substance use disorders. Otherwise, it would be easy to simply "just stop." In active addiction, destructive paths are consistent. Needs of others aren't considered. Relationships are non-existent, or strained to capacity at best. Addiction has the power to destroy.

It's been called "the ritual of forgetting oneself." Isolation. Drug use. Overpowering and destructive behaviors. Disconnection from emotion and feelings.

But then there is COURAGE. Courage to want something different.

Courage to stop long enough and in the stillness take personal moral inventory. To take a truthful and long look within yourself to identify negative thoughts, unflattering truths and personality traits to allow for growth and self-improvement. Courage to find another way. Courage to ask for help, reach out for help, and find help. Courage to be vulnerable with solid support systems (that perhaps you feel as though you don't deserve) or sponsors who share hope, health and healing right where you are. Daily courage, effective treatment, recovery-supportive environments, relapse prevention plans and one day at a time... the courage evolves into a refusal to ever go back to devastating behaviors, choices and consequences.

And it all starts with a moment of courage...

The importance of your work is underscored by how incredibly hard it is. Any given day might bring massive challenges with your clients or patients. Who else is in it for all the right reasons? They look to you. And you look to Santé Center for Healing for expertise, integrity and long-term recovery...for all the right reasons.
